Event Outline

- 9.00 Introductory Session and News from The School,
Myles Downey & Lynne-Marie Eccleston
- 9.30 Changing the Quality of Conversations on the Planet. As likely as Lady Gaga dressing sensibly or an aspiration more relevant today than ever?
Sheridan Maguire, The School of Coaching Faculty
In an informal conversation, and with The School's original vision as a starting point, we'll discuss the current landscape of coaching, some possible new trends, and how coaching practice might develop. This is a participative session, not a lecture, so be prepared to share and discuss ideas and opinions.
- 10.30 An introduction to the Integral Model as a Tool for Coaches and Consultants,
Andy Mais, JMJ Associates
This session will introduce you to Ken Wilber's Integral Model. This approach, as its name suggests, aims to be comprehensive, holistic and to take into account all relevant factors. This means it will look both inside a person at mindsets, values, and cultures and outside at their skills and behaviours, as well as to the wider organisational and social systems etc. Its beauty is in the simplicity with which it can be applied to reveal blind spots and openings for action in individuals and groups.
- 12.00 Ethical Dilemmas in Coaching
Katharine St John-Brooks, Working Solutions
Every coach has to deal with tricky ethical dilemmas but how well equipped to deal with them do you feel? Katharine will speak about the results of her recent research, drawing on the experiences of over 120 internal coaches in 30 of the largest users of internal coaches in the UK, into the ethical dilemmas that can arise for coaches and she will lead a discussion about which dilemmas resonate for you, what you have encountered and how they might deal with them.
